MEDICINAL. There was a cry in the streets. People rushed from their doors and strained their eyes on the struggling balloonist fighting for life. Even the poor, panting sufferer in the sick room was forgotten while the family gazed breathless at this strange tragedy of the air. Then they went back to the sick room to tell of the terrible struggle for life they had just witnessed. It did not occur to them that under their very eyes a more terrible, more pathetic struggle was going on daily.

PRESIDENT IN THE SOUTH.

President Roosevelt and the members of his party are now in Charleston, It is the first extended trip the President has made from Washington since he became a resident of the White House. He naturally takes a keen in-t-re-t in his visit to Charleston and has shown a desire to glean all the information possible bearing upon South Carolina and her people.

As stated in the Gez t e the presi-dential train left Washington at 3:30 o'clock. There was a large crowd at the station. The Preci deet was driven to the Sixth street entrance instead of B street, where most of those resembled expected him, and passed rapidly to the train as derived in the air.

A large number of secret service men and detectives were spread about the depct and several accompanied the party on the train. The crowd twice cheered the President beartily. As the long special train pulled out of the train and exactly on schedule time. train shed, exactly on schedule time, the President, his face suffused with smiles, stood on the rear platform of the train and bowed low and repeated-ly in acknowledgment of salutes of the ly in acknowledgment of salutes of the crowd. The train passed through Alexa dria shortly before 4 o'clock.

Col. L. S. Brown, of the Southern Railway, was with the party supervising the trip over the Southern system and the train was in direct charge of Conductor W. M. Johnson, who has handled most of the president alspecials in recent months. The train arrived in Charleston this morning.

Within a short time after the train left, Mr. Rooseve t was sitting on the rear platform of the observation car with Attorney-General Knox, Col. Murat Halithad and Mr. Brown. As the cars rolled through Virginia, the batlefields of Bull Run, Manassas, Brandy Station and other historical points associated with the civil war, fornished an interesting topic of con-furnished an interesting topic of con Mr. Brown, as historian of the party, pointed out the various places of in-terest, and the President showed re-markable familiarity with the war his-tory of each place. He recalled names of officers on both sides who figured conspicuously in the engagements and commented upon the mer to and demerits of the opposing commanders. He seemed to depend entirely upon his reeding to recall these stirring evert in the nation's history and needed but the suggestion of the name of the spot to refresh his memory on the subject.

The veteran journalist, Murat Halcontribu reminiscences, including his recoilec-tion of the famous national convention held in Charleston in 1860, which resulted in the division of the democratic

As the train dashed past the variou way stations a few people assembled to wave a greeting to the President. The first tip of any importance was at Reminston, formerly Rappebannock. Here several hundred people crowded around the President's car and cheered. The President arose and bowed his acknowledgments as the train moved on.
From the train the President was shows the historic home of Jefferson, near Charlott swille, which called forth a discussion of that illustrious man and his public deeds.

The trip was without special incident until Charlottesville was reached. There several hundred persons had assembled, many of them students from the University of Virginis. The crowd cheered enthusiastically, and the Presi-dent could not resist the temptation to say a few words. He raised his hand to invoke silence, but such a movement was unnecessary, for the crowd seemed anxious to hear him. After acknowledging the cordial greeting the Presi-

I want to say how glad I am to see you and what an interesting thing it must be to every American to come through this historic land. As we pass by the vista in the woods we saw the home of the Madisons. Your great university here is associated with the early Presiden s of our country. I see before me men who were in the Spanish war. We are here on the land fought over by those who were the gray and those wh wore the blue, and those men and their descendants now stand shoulder to shoulder as good citizens, interested in all that concerns the welfare of our common nation. [Applause.] It is a great pleasure to catch this gilmpse of you, and I thank you for your kindly reception." [Applause] The closing sentences of the President made a st ong impression. The idea conveyed is that he proposes to use his individual efforts to wipe out all traces of sectionalism. This, it is said, will be the keynch of the speech he will deliver on the Expostion grounds at Charleston Wednesday.

When he concluded his remarks the university boys let off a college yell, evidently prepared for the occasion.
